Real Estate Q&A: Ask the Expert

Question of the Month:

"Regarding home maintenance, if you had to pick one or two things to keep up with, what would those things be?" – Maggie Bruno, Misty Morning Lane

There are so many items to maintain and keep up with in residential structure, but I think the most basic two things are: Keeping your gutters and downspouts clear; and keeping your drains and drainage pipes clear.

OK, some of you may be thinking "What a snoozer this subject is!" But in reality: Keeping water away from the base of your house is a big deal. Just the other day we had one of those massive rainstorms, and I noticed water POURING over the corner of one of my gutters, pounding down on my patio. It was a helpless feeling just watching the destruction occur, and as a temporary measure I ran outside (getting soaking wet) and placed something on the patio to deflect the pounding water. The next day I got on my ladder and found the closest downspout was clogged where it joined the gutter. Fortunately, I was able to clear it myself in about 5 minutes – it was just some roof debris and leaves. When I originally bought my home, it had covers/guards on the gutters to keep the leaves out, but I noticed that in heavy "gulley-washer" rains, the water would run right over the guards at the corners and pour down onto the sides of the house. After talking to several gutter people, I removed the gutter covers and committed to have my gutters professionally cleaned twice a year: once in Fall after the leaves have fallen, and once in Spring before the big rains arrive. This system has worked well, and I have no more water running over my gutters (except for the occasional clog). Between cleanings, I keep a sharp eye out for any signs of leakage, and make sure things are repaired and/or cleared ASAP.

Keeping drains & drainage pipes clear is also essential to moving water away from your house. If you have underground pipes that carry the water away from your downspouts (or patio drains), a clogged pipe completely ruins the system...water backs up, flows uncontrolled, and typically makes channels to the lowest nearby point. Sometimes you can unclog a blockage - there are rooter systems and water pressure systems to do just that – but if the pipes have been there a long time and are fully clogged by intrusive roots, the long-term solution is to dig up and replace the underground pipes. Yes, I have had the pleasure of having to get that done at my house...it's expensive and was not one of my favorite projects. The key here is to regularly inspect your drains and keep them as clean as possible, so that debris doesn't build up inside the pipes to start with.

Whether buying or selling, work with someone who knows home maintenance inside and out: Mitch Falkin. And before you know it, you too will be "Moving with Mitch!"

After months of planning, Horseshoe Bend's newest amenity – a top-of-theline playground – officially opened in the Tom Harris Meadow.

The playground, which includes several slides and a collection of swings, is surrounded by new sod and woodchips on top of improved irrigation. Additionally, a new fence was constructed for safety and to properly frame the playground area. Three metal benches were also installed adjacent to the playground to provide seating. In the coming weeks, we will add additional playground items for toddlers to use.

The board would like to thank residents who provided feedback during the playground planning process as well as volunteers who helped install the benches. We hope this new amenity provides enjoyment for children and families in Horseshoe Bend for many years to come!

PARKING NOTE: When parking on Wayt Rd., only park on the side of the street across from the lake. DO NOT park on the lake side.

A Heartfelt Thanks from Court Five

By George Dilworth

On a hot summer day at the Horseshoe Bend Country Club Tennis Center, the day began much like most days in the summer. Sweat dripped from all the participants at the For the Love of Inclusion Tennis Tournament benefiting the Kyle Pease Foundation. The event was organized by Horseshoe Bend resident Justin Adler. Over 80 individuals donated to the cause and participated in an epic tennis event for the charity.

The tennis players, including myself, were ushered onto court five for a large group photo to commemorate the event. The sun was starting to challenge the photographer, who mid-shoot asked the group to face the opposite side of the court for a surprise shot. Those hiding in the back, including myself, were now front and center. Next to me, my partner for the day, Wes Thompson, was on a knee on court five smiling for the photo and was at the center of the group. That accidental turn of events was going to foreshadow the day's events.

Wes and I started strong in the tournament with several quick victories, only to fade as the day progressed and it became even hotter. The temperature was well into the 90s with no relief even in the sparse shadows near the edges of the courts.

Around mid-day, the sound of a loud thud accompanied by the shout of "man down" echoed from two courts away. It was surreal. The entire tennis center became quite all at once. Only a few brave souls appeared to react. Wes was one of the first to spring into action. He dropped his tennis racket and ran to court five where a man was down. This time Wes took a knee on the center of court five to help save a life. There were no smiles this time.

One of the men playing tennis had suffered a heart attack. No pulse, no breathing, tongue lodged in the back of his throat, Wes started emergency rescue breaths after dislodging the victim's tongue. He was accompanied by three other heroes including Lindsay Melcher, a Pediatric nurse who administered CPR. Lindsay also lives in Horseshoe Bend and described her emotions as "being so focused on her [patient] that she had no to have time to be scared." Later, she went on to confess she had no idea what Wes looked like. All of her attention was focused on the patient. The team worked non-stop for almost half an hour providing chest compressions, mouth-to-mouth resuscitation, as well as using the tennis center's AED Defibrillator Machine to help save the man's life. According to Wes, Lindsay instructed the lifesaving team flawlessly.

Eventually, the Roswell Fire Department arrived followed by an ambulance. The man was now breathing on his own and was heard to ask – "did we win the match?" He was alive and on his way to the hospital where he would eventually undergo an angioplasty procedure with two stents and lots of great medical care. He is back home and well on his way to recovery.

Lindsay Melcher and Wes Thompson as well as two non-residents of Horseshoe Bend saved the man's life. These are stories we hear about every day, but they do not occur in our neighborhood every day. We want to give special thanks to both for stepping forward and using their amazing skills when it truly counted. They came, they volunteered, and they saved a man's life – a truly amazing story.

In chatting with Wes and Lindsay, they both highly recommend everyone should be trained in CPR. You never know when you might have the opportunity to save a life.

Wes Thompson and Lindsay Melcher

UPCOMING TREE CANOPY WORK THROUGHOUT NEIGHBORHOOD

In recent years, the tree canopy throughout Horseshoe Bend has become overgrown. In some areas, overhanging branches have come in contact with delivery trucks, leading to broken branches that fall into travel lanes. This is a safety issue for residents and visitors to the neighborhood that needs to be addressed. In other cases, overhanging tree branches have negatively impacted the growth of plants and bushes below them.

To address this, the Horseshoe Bend Community Association has contracted with a tree service to raise the tree canopy hanging over the roads throughout the community in the coming weeks. Our primary landscaping company for the community does not conduct major tree work. During this work, there may be tree branches hanging into the street that originate from trees on private property. The contractor has been instructed not to enter private property without the property owner's consent. Without consent, the contractor will prune the specific branches back to raise the canopy to the most aesthetically pleasing state as possible while focused on traffic safety. For best results, it is recommended to allow the contractor access to private property areas, as needed.

Please note that large bushes, hedges, and ornamental trees are not in scope.

If you have questions or concerns, please direct those to Laurel Mizell at hsbhome@aol.com.
